

AMERICAN BOARD OF COLON AND RECTAL SURGERY

ABCRS Conflict of Interest Policy

Active and Senior Board Members, Associate Examiners and any other persons such as appointed members of the subcommittees of the Board who have access to examination material or who have participated in the examination process must avoid conflicts of interest between other educational activities and the activities of the American Board of Colon and Rectal Surgery. Active Board Members are prohibited from participating in, endorsing or organizing a course, seminar, book or other activity which claims to be preparation for any examination offered by the American Board of Colon and Rectal Surgery. Participation in any Colon and Rectal Surgery specific board reviews and commercial board reviews in other specialties is not allowed. Senior Members and Associate Examiners who wish to participate in such preparatory courses shall not be asked to participate in the Certifying Examinations of the Board. Non-commercial general surgery activity (e.g. mock oral examinations within one's own general surgery program) is allowed. Questions may be submitted for self-assessment CME programs. Participation in mock oral examinations is prohibited for Senior Members until one year after completing service to the Board as examiners. Participation in mock oral examinations is prohibited for Associate Examiners from the time of acceptance as an examiner until one year following the completion of their term as an examiner.

Revised: October 1, 2013